

Unique Gifts With a Unique History

In the spring of 2003, coalition forces were called in to secure the banks in Basra, Iraq. During the operation, they discovered a collection of brilliant, uncirculated Iraqi coins that were decommissioned by Saddam Hussein at the end of the first Gulf War. Although the coins could not be used for monetary purposes, they came to symbolize freedom and the sacrifices made to preserve it. The coalition forces wanted them to be a part of doing something good. So they decided to auction off the coins and use the proceeds to rebuild an orphanage in Basra that had been destroyed during Saddam's reign.

Products for Good acquired the coins and developed a line of products that give everyone a unique opportunity to honor and express their gratitude to our men and women in uniform. As Products for Good is partnering with the USO, 100 percent of the profits from the sale of these gifts are donated to USO programs such as the Warrior Family Support Centers and the United Through Reading's Military Program.

These patriotic gifts are assembled at Cleveland Vocational Industries, a facility in North Carolina that provides employment for mentally and physically challenged individuals.

From the recipients who feel recognized when they receive these gifts and the wounded and their families who benefit from our donations to the disabled Americans who assemble our products, every "Honor One, Help Many" gift tells a story of honor, hope and gratitude. We look forward to hearing yours.
